New Lawyer; Trial Delayed

WARRING TONE POST

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 12 (UPI) — James Earl Ray formally hired Percy Foreman today to defend him against charges of murdeting the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and a judge, calling the lastminute delay. "an awful thing," postponed his trial until March 3.

Art Hanes, sacked by Ray in favor of Foreman, told reporters the switch "was a delaying tactic pure and simple. I was prepared to go to trial but my client wanted a delay."

Ray's trial for the April 4 slaying of the civil rights leader was to have begun today, but Criminal Court Judge W. Preston Battle said he had no choice but to delay

"It's an awful thing to have to continue a case at this time," said the judge, "but the defendant's right to counsel of his own choice is guaranteed by the Constitution of the State of Tennessee."

Battle set the March 3 date apparently a tentative one -when Foreman and prosecuting attorneys failed to agree among themselves on a new starting time. It gives Foreman 111 days to prepare

See RAY, At, Col.

RAY, From AISHINGTON 20571 in the count

lawyer indicated he didn't lawyer switch. think it would be enough.

"Let the court know on or about Dec. 12 if you can get ready March 3," Battle told Ray's trial began about 15 attorney. minutes late. The defendant, "Uh, yes sir," answered Ray. led in by deputies.

Neatly Dressed

dark suit with faint pin at all. He said the 40-year-old stripes, accentuating his escaped convict was trifling prison pallor. Battle ordered with the court." im given a copy of a letter. Battle said that "a defendat Ray assued from his antimategal case has an abs his case, and the Texas trial jail Sunday, announcing the

"Did you send that letter?" the gray haired judge asked.

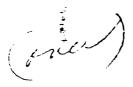

Ray, on his feet, replied, "Uh, yes, sir."

Battle asked him if it was "I'll let you know," Foreman correct that he wanted to fire Hanes, whom he hired from What was to have been London, and take on another looking "sick and scared" ac- He said no more, and after the cording to a British attorney hearing was ended—it was who represented him when he punctuated by a recess of was arrested in London, was more than an hour-he was led back to the jail. 🦠

Memphis Assistant Attorney General Robert K. Dwyer ob-He was neatly dressed in a jected vigorously to any delay

United Press International

Foreman leaves Criminal Court in Memphis after gaining a trial continuance until March 3. Ray's cell is on the top floor of the building behind the attorney.

Original Ray attorney Hanes and son talk with newsmen after leaving Shelby County courthouse in Memphis. Hanes has been ordered by Judge Batt on contempt of court his case files to new

13 NOV 1968 WASHINGTON POST WYER, Gets Delay in Trial

lute right to hire his lawyers space 35 seats—in the court his name, address, business This is an 11th hour motion, room for the general public. so to speak—the 59th minute Washington Post reporter reason for attending the hear-and 59th second. As far attempted to be seated yesterknew, as late as noon Sunday lator but was turned away cated he could no nothing but quired to fill out a form giving was ordered to leave. grant the delay.

He was then searched by an everything was green light in After entering the court officer, but after another offithis asse."

He was then searched by an everything was green light in After entering the court officer, but after another offithis asse."

"I think the case here is unique in many ways-unique in the number of witnesses-360 potential for the state and the defense with more, and these witnesses to come from the United States, Mexico, Canada, England, Portugal, France-a good portion of North America and Europe."

Dwyer, in his protest against the delay, said he had 10 witnesses "alerted" to tesify.

Battle kept Hanes, a former 3irmingham mayor and FBI igent, and his son, also an atorney, associated with Ray in ourt records so they would be cept under his anti-publicity

Nevertheless, Battle indi-prospective spectators, was re- Post" reference on the form, firm, telephone number and cated he could no nothing but quired to make grant the delay.

"I think the case here is unique in many ways—unique in the number of witnesses—360 potential for the state and the defense with more, and these witnesses to come from the United States, Mexico, Canada, England, Portugal, France—a good portion of North America and Europe."

Dwyer, in his protest against the delay, sald he had 30 witnesses "alerted" to tesify.

Battle kept Hanes, a former Birmingham mayor and FBI igent, and his son, also an atorney, associated with Ray in ourt records so they would be cept under his anti-publicity orders.

Hanes had refused to turnover his records to Foreman, claiming Ray still owed him $12,000, but Battle ordered him to hand all his files on the case to Foreman.

'A Delaying Tactic'

After the hearing was over, Hanes said, "In my judgment it was all a delaying tactic.

"I advised the prosecutors and the judge as much as a month ago that this was in the works," said Hanes.

"The disagreements boiled down to the fact that I was prepared to go to trial but my client wanted a delay. I was the lawyer in the case, not James Earl Ray." (Hanes added that Ray was hopeful of doing better when the Republican Administration takes over, Associated Press reported.)

Foreman argued that "the only way to prepare a case is to talk to the witnesses. I in tend to do my best to talk to every one of the 360 that will talk to the."

He said two hours spiece for 360 witnesses worked out to 90 days.

Foreman told Battle the state probably wouldn't call in more than 80 or 90 of the 360 prospective witnesses, but "you know, your honor, from your previous experience, the ones they are not going to call are the very ones the defense should interview."

Washington Post Staff Writer Paul W. Valentine reported the following on seating and security arrangements in effect in the courtroom:

Restrictions on press coverage of the Ray case have created unusual difficulties for newsmen. Judge Battle allocated 42 of the 77 seats in the courtroom to specific news media, but excluded several dozen additional papers and television outlets, among them The Washington Post.

Battle said the exclusions, had to be made to assure...

.